

The Department of Cellular Biology at the University of Georgia invites applications for two positions at the rank of Lecturer to begin in Fall 2022. Responsibilities for the position include instruction of lecture courses, primarily in human anatomy and physiology, and oversight of the associated laboratory courses including the management of graduate teaching assistants. Successful candidates will also contribute to the department's undergraduate curriculum as needed. A Ph.D. in a biological science or a related field is required. Exceptions to the terminal degree requirement may be made for individuals whose experience and accomplishments compensate for, or make irrelevant, the lack of a terminal degree. A request for an exception is subject to prior approval by the Provost following receipt of supporting documentation and the dean's. Ideal candidates will have at least two years of experience teaching large lecture courses and/or courses in anatomy and physiology.

Candidates should submit application materials electronically at <https://www.ugajobsearch.com/postings/234512>. Application materials should include a CV; cover letter; list of three references including contact information; one-page statement of teaching philosophy, and a teaching portfolio that includes a one-page diversity, equity, and inclusion statement, evidence of effective instruction, and a brief statement on the candidate's qualifications to teach human anatomy and physiology courses. Questions about the search should be sent to cbsearch@uga.edu. For assistance using UGAJobs, please call (706)542-2222 or email employ@uga.edu. Applications received before February 14, 2022 will receive priority consideration.
